LATEST BIRD SIGHTINGS AND A SUMMARY OF BIRDS SEEN ON THE ISLAND IN 2013

There is very little new to report since the last edition of The Limpet, which is not surprising given the generally very mild conditions so far this Winter. The one very short cold snap had very little impact on the island's birdlife but two or three Ivory Gulls - which breed in the high Arctic regions - arrived in the UK, including a juvenile on Orkney Mainland. The only Stronsay record of Ivory Gull we know of was of one seen by Jim and Fran at Banks over twenty years ago. This bird - a pure white adult - was typically feeding on the beached carcass of a dolphin. It was also typically tame and allowed approach to within a few feet! The juvenile bird (white with black spots) currently on Mainland Orkney in Evie, has been present for several days, feeding on a beached whale carcass.

Brief Summary of the Year

2013 has been yet another excellent year for unusual bird sightings and once again we are left wondering just how much we must miss, given that so many of the rarities were discovered in totally fortuitous circumstances!

Surprises are always the best however and the first of the year was a white Gyrfalcon seen at several sites in the first three months, while at Castle, the wintering Blue Tit was present until late March. An amazing find on 18th March was a Chaffinch of the race 'africana' at Kirkhall - the same day as one arrived in S Armagh! Norman & Kath Kent found a Goosander on the Matpow Loch in mid-April and the next island 'rarity' was a Hawfinch found on the roadside verge near Southbank in early April, with a second bird found by Butch and Flo at Seaview the following day. Another was in the Castle garden next day. Several Red-backed Shrikes were seen in late Spring but the most spectacular find was a Bee-eater near the South School where it spent several days. A new species for the island was seen briefly on 3rd and then again on 4th June - a Black Kite, mobbed by a Short-eared Owl over the Rothiesholm Moor.

A few Barred and several Yellow-browed Warblers were seen in Autumn when another real surprise was a Common Crane flying in from the east at Cleat on 5th October. Two major rarities arrived on 20th October during a spell of SE winds and torrential rain - a Black-eared Wheatear and a Siberian Meadow Bunting - and yet again at Cleat! A Grey Wagtail was at Airy next day and a Great Grey Shrike at Whitehall Farm on 22nd. Just 3 Waxwings were seen in late Autumn when another Hawfinch was found, and at least two Great Spotted Woodpeckers were present, singles seen at several sites - including the Ro-Ro Pier!

Some of the surprises of 2013:

Not rare - but a surprise to see two Whooper Swans, swimming gracefully, close to the road at the Blan Loch in February

A chance visit to Kirkhall in March and there, in the drive, was this 'africana' (African) Chaffinch - just the 5th or 6th record for the UK.

A real surprise for Wendy and Dennis from the window at Linkshouse in May - a Red-backed Shrike perfectly framed by the by the flowering currant hedge.

The fabulous Bee-eater near the South School - found during a morning walk by visitors George and Betty Winslow. A species they had never seen before.

The flycatcher in The Manse garden in late September - still not specifically identified!

An unconcerned Arctic Tern next to the road in late September - photographed from the car at 6ft range. We were more surprised than the bird!

The small loch at Gorie's seldom attracts wildfowl - so this Long-tailed Duck there in late September was another real surprise.

This Merlin, photographed in mid-October, was probably the same bird seen by the Minibus group the following day - the highlight of the trip!

And talking of Minibus Trips we have just heard that funding has become available and the proposed 5 minibus trips around the island will take place, beginning sometime in the new year depending on birds/weather. Look out for posters in the island shops or ring us at Castle 616363.

A very big thank-you to all who have helped us in 2013. Happy Christmas and best Wishes for 2014.

John & Sue

CHRISTMAS THANK YOU LETTERS

By Roger Neville-Smith

Dear Mary

Thank you so much for the partridge in a pear tree. I have not had any success with fruit bushes while living at Windybank due to the inclement weather. As soon as the gales blow over I will be out side looking for a suitable place. The partridge, who I have called Speedy, is looking anxious but is holding onto his branch with grim determination. Best wishes from from your loving nephew Grimshaw

Dear Mary

It is only the second day of Christmas and I have received another present from you. Sadly the gale did not ease and Speedy was last seen going like his name towards Muckle Water. The pair of binoculars will be useful when I venture out to look for him. All the best this festive season, Grimshaw

Dear Mary

I can not believe it! I had just returned from my fruitless walk in search of Speedy when I saw the back of Jim's lorry - he had left a crate at the door. So there to celebrate the third day of Christmas were three fancy hens. They just loved scratching the ground where I really must plant the tress. Mabel and Minnie are now in a rapidly constructed coop to get away from Bracken. You may remember I told you about the dog and her interest in wild life. Well Maureen is not going to join us next Christmas. Thanks for your generosity. Love Grimshaw

Dear Mary

Now then, I do not remember saying to you that I plan to become a farmer. How am I supposed to look after four pet sheep. They have already pushed through the fence and eaten my entire broccoli crop. I have done my best to keep Bracken away from them but her eyes keeping rolling and she is drooling in a disturbing way. I have put last years present, "Dogs are naturally vegetarians" into her basket and hope this takes her mind off her blood lust. I am sure your intentions were good. Love Grimshaw

Dear Mary

So far, the last five days have been busy, what with patrolling the sky for Speedy, feeding the hens and repairing fences so that the sheep cause no more damage. My delight rapidly faded after the delivery of five suckling calves. Usually when opening a present I expect to find instructions but these calves have obviously eaten them. They are far too peedie to manage outside so I have spent the day emptying the byre, laying on water and phoning round for some help. Recycled Iron Brew bottles and fingers from surgical gloves made feeding bottles where a revolting paste of milk and corn flour has been consumed by the famished quadrapeds. Cecil the largest is now groaning in pain so I may have to call the vet. My farm is now complete and am grateful for no more additions. Grimshaw

Dear Mary

I have not managed to get to A&E because the ferries and planes are off. The enthusiastic calves have broken out of the byre and the sheep are singing Ba Ba black sheep. I told them that will only encourage Bracken but they take no notice. There is a fierce east-westerly blowing and a plague of greylags have taken over the air strip. The sixth day of Christmas is a bad day for anything. I guess my arm will heal. I also know nothing about laying geese so six was an unwelcomed surprise. I have few friends left here so please, no more gifts. Grimshaw

Dear Mary

Postie delivered seven aeronautic pheasants today. I do not need anymore animals and can not keep up with the sheep who have broken into the house and are warming themselves by the fire. I am looking out the recipe book you sent when I first left home "Several things to do with a dead pheasant". I plan to eat them before they ravage my spring planting. If you have anymore bright ideas, sit on them! Grimshaw

Dear Mary

I am beginning to dread the arrival of any wheeled vehicles to Windybank but today I was pleased to find 8 rolls of fencing wire. I presume this is to mend the enclosures and restore the sheep to the field. I have been on the phone to Mainland for stabs, staples and tools. When the snow melts I will get to work assuming that I have not been hospitalized before. No more animals, I beg you. Grimshaw

Dear Mary

I woke this morning to find nine goats on the lawn, I presume another of your jokes. Most appear to have bursting udders but at least one is a Billy. By mid morning, one had its horns tangled up in the rolls of fence wire and the shrubs are being taken out at an alarming rate. I have spent 4 hours milking the ladies and have collected it in the bath, being the only place that is big enough. One of the cats has already fallen in while trying drink it. I think I will need to go on medication soon. Grimshaw

Dear Mary

After I tried to get some sleep, which was difficult due to the geese also being in the house, I was woken by a knock on the door. Ten young women dressed in quaint old fashioned clothes introduced themselves as milking maids. Thankfully they had each brought a bucket and stool so I set them in pursuit of the goats. I am looking at last-minute-holiday-bookings to see if I can escape this mad house. Grimshaw

Dear Mary

The doctor says I have a chronic stress disorder and advised me to reduce my live stock. I could not agree more. Eleven tanks of Salmon smolt was not what I am needing right now! I have no ponds, feed or experience. I have put some in an old bath and slipped the rest into the ditches. You can not drive me insane that easily; you will not inherit my grandmothers china teapot. Grimshaw

Mary

You cruel deranged witch. I thought if I kept the lights out and lay under the table, no one would know I was at home. I peeped out from time to time and at mid day I saw twelve out-sized lama. The sheep have gone berserk and are away in a distant field, the maids are all demanding a minimum legal wage and SEPA have phoned me about a reported freak influx of land salmon. You can have the blessed teapot, just do not send me anything for as long as I live.

GAIN INDEPENDENCE FROM PERPETUAL CALENDAR PURCHASING

In 2014 we in North Britain will have the chance to decide whether or not what hath been joined together should be put asunder. But before you rush out to buy your “Scottish Independence Referendum Year” calendar, did you save the one from the year of the Scottish Devolution Referendum? If you did, you are in luck, because the 1997 calendar is valid for 2014, as is the calendar from 2003, which saw referendums in nine European countries on joining the EU. And so is the one from 1975, when the UK held a referendum on leaving it.

How many Orkney Liberals held on to that 1975 calendar, to celebrate Jo Grimond calling for home rule for Orkney should the UK break up? “We don’t want centralisation in Glasgow or Edinburgh any more than in London” he said. Maybe he was reusing an old 1969 calendar when he wrote those words, and remembered that was the year Orkney ceased to have an independent police force (the start of a process which led ultimately to today’s Police Scotland — with its HQ less than 40 miles from both Glasgow and Edinburgh).

When pondering these things, don’t confuse 1468 (Orkney’s impignoration to Scotland) with 1486, the year Kirkwall was granted its royal charter by James III. Although calendars from neither of these years can be reused in 2014, the one commemorating the quincentenary (in 1986) of the latter event can.

Speaking of events, many people will have saved the aforementioned 1969 calendar as a souvenir of the first moon landing (mankind’s giant step towards independence from Earth). Now you can bring it out into the sunlight once more.

There are plenty of calendars from independence years that can grace your wall in 2014: 1913, when Albania’s independence was recognised by the Treaty of London; 1919, when the Treaty of Rawalpindi saw the departure of Afghanistan from the British Empire; and, of course, 1947, with The Partition and independence for Pakistan and India; not to mention 1958, when Guinea declared its independence from France.

1930 and 1941 calendars can also be deployed again, as can the one from 1902, the year Scotland’s other (and better) bard, William Topaz McGonagall passed away. Had he still been with us, he would undoubtedly have penned a poetic gem about the Scottish Independence Referendum.

Don’t forget to put your 2013 calendar safely away, for whatever the outcome of the referendum (unless we adopt a new revolutionary calendar, such as the French used from 1793 to 1805), you will be able to use it again in 2019.

MUSIC BOX!

By Ellie from Newfield

Where have been, my friend?
For here you are at last,
Old acquaintance that you are
From the not-so-distant past!

Little music box
As soft as a ball of wool
Bright as a brand new button
For no-one could think you dull.

You wear it well I'd say
That waistcoat of distinction.
What a travesty it would be
Should you ever border on extinction.

Iconic little treasure
Famous for those flame-coloured feathers,
Scarlet red upon your breast
As you flit amongst the garden's heathers,
The perfect music box
Singing in seven octaves.

What a joy you are
As you brighten the greyest of days.

For such a tiny creature
You deliver a belting tune.
I am a captive, willing audience.
To be fair, I would say, I croon.

Mother Nature's music box
In her wisdom must favour you
For maybe even she
In winter-time can feel blue.
How she must delight
In your lilting melodies
For even the garden's blackbirds
Are seemingly spell-bound in the trees.

The garden may be sleeping
On a botanical standby
Whilst from these evergreens
You sing a lullaby.

Charming Robin Redbreast
Winter's colourful boy.

Always a welcome in my garden
May you always fill it with joy
It seems to me each season
Holds a jewel among its days
Robin Redbreast music box
Worthy of our praise.

OFTEC TRAINING

As many of you already know I have just spent two weeks down in Cornwall on a course qualifying me to install, commission, and service pressure jet and vaporising oil burners and oil storage tanks.

The first week of the course was designed for people like myself with little or no experience and mostly covered the environmental and safety aspects of oil installations and theory of installations. For this time I was on my own as three other candidates cancelled at the last moment. This was great for me as it meant I had one to one tuition! The first two days of the second week was mostly taken up with practical training followed by three days of assessments. As OFTEC stipulates that registered technicians need to be re-assessed every 5 years there were four others on the course for this week.

When I receive my certificates for the training centre I will apply to OFTEC (oil firing technical association) for registration on their Competent Persons scheme which will allow me to commission and certify new installations for the environment agency as well as receiving technical help and updates.

I should hopefully have all the test equipment I need and be able to start work by the New Year but in the meantime please contact me if you would like your oil appliance serviced or repaired.

Call me on 616339.

Mike Erdman

STRONSAY COMMUNITY PLAY-PARK ACTION GROUP

We are a small, temporary group aiming to raise funds to purchase and install new equipment at the Community Hall play-park. Our next meeting will be held at the Community Hall on Thursday 28th November at 7.30pm.

Please feel welcome to attend even if you were not at the first meeting – the more the merrier. Bring lots of creative ideas and enthusiasm! Thanks very much to all who attended in October.

Viv Erdman has very kindly offered use of the porch at Ebenezer's, so if you have any unwanted items you would be happy to donate, please bring them along! Likewise, please come and browse –donations made to purchase items will be used to help our group raise funds for new play-park equipment. Thank you!

M Dennison.
