DON PEACE 1946-2023

Donald Shepherd Peace was born at Brigend in Rothiesholm, Stronsay on 1st December 1946. Being born in Rothiesholm meant that he was a "Pirate", which he was rather proud of – he and his sisters Emma and Elaine (Naine) often talked about their idyllic childhood there. His parents were Margaret Chalmers (Meg) and Donald Peace (Danny) who were both from Stronsay, and consequently Don had a very large extended family on the island with over twenty first cousins!

The Peace family moved to Samsonslane in May 1958, but in 1960 his father was very badly burnt when a defective pump sprayed petrol over him - Don left school at 14 to help out full time on the farm. He had hoped to get a job at sea and now had to change plans, but he did have a small boat for much of his life and thoroughly enjoyed going out to the creels, including several years running the boat "Odette" with his brother-in-law David Harcus.

Like many islanders, Don undertook a number of roles. He was the Rothiesholm postie, was in the Coastguard and the Fire Brigade, ran the pre-RoRo agricultural contracting and haulage business, was the island's man on the ground for the Hydro, drove the school bus (often in his slippers) and ran the local taxi and hire car business for decades with his wife Eunice and latterly partner Julie. He claimed to have been a Sunday School teacher as well, but the jury is out on that one, particularly given that he had dressed up in drag as "Miss Take" at a do in the church hall. He had a tremendous sense of humour, a real practical joker and a consummate wind-up merchant - with a nickname for practically everyone.

He kept the farm of Samsonslane running throughout, and was particularly obsessed with tatties, supplying much of the island with his output. He would argue the pros and cons of different strains, and fret about the perils of blight to the extent that he would dream about tatties in his sleep. He was also very partial to partans and lobsters, and one of his biggest frustrations with getting arthritis was that he could no longer go out to the spoots. Many of the very frequent visitors calling by Samsons would often leave (after multiple coffees and/or drams) with some sort of produce – he was very much a people person and very hospitable.

In his youth he enjoyed games of badminton, darts and pool and played football for Stronsay for many years, getting immense satisfaction on any occasions when they beat Sanday or Westray. He was very much a "Stronsay man" and genuinely could not understand why anyone would want to live anywhere else.

Don was a very versatile and naturally talented musician (he couldn't read music), and played in island bands for over sixty years, starting at the age of 14. Although he was best known for his keyboard playing, he also played guitar, double bass and drums. The various incarnations of the Stronsay band were in great demand across Orkney, and he often commented on how many great musicians there were in Orkney generally and Stronsay specifically. He loved the idea of the Silver Darlings and whole-heartedly supported that, with Courtney and Juliete both involved. Latterly he was cajoled into playing with the Stronsay Band in the recording of the Limpets and Laughter CD.

Don died in the Balfour Hospital in the early hours of the 4th of March, with his daughters Verona and Sonya by his side. When news of Don's passing broke, an astonishing number of people posted comments and thoughts on social media, reflecting just what a well-known person he was in Stronsay and across Orkney. "He was some man" was a typical comment. He certainly was. Stronsay has lost one of its great characters; he will be sorely missed but very fondly remembered.

JOHN HOLLOWAY 1944-2023

Altho we live a ways off from Stronsay, we have cherished learning about birds from John. My husband and I met him and his lovely wife once in their home. This is sent in thankful appreciation of his skill as an artist, a teacher, a watcher of our beautiful creation. (Some of the birds and details mentioned come from his last bird report.)

What a lovely man on a wild and splendid island.

Gratefully,
Dana Littlepage

In thankful memory of John, the Birdman

Snow bunting settling like a flake in the tundra of morning, can you feel the set of eyes, flown from Star Island? The one who helped us to wonder at your wonder? Golden eagle eyed, now sun-eclipsed, or slyly hiding in the long white where the sparrow hawk rides. Maybe he's sped along with the chaffinches over-wintering in the tattie field... The body flies, yet the spirit refuses to hide, entirely. See those seven or eight Chiff Chaffs? He may have slipped between them and you. He's in the simplest delight, that's here, now, for this ... and every other season.

NANA PEACE 1920-2023

Nana Peace wrote several articles for the Stronsay Limpet. Here is one of her articles which first appeared in the February 2014 edition of the Limpet.

THE SHOP AT ELLERSLIE

By Nana Peace

After writing about the shop at Holin it is now my time to tell about the one at Ellerslie. First I remember it was a very small shop owned by a woman called Barbara Wallace. After she retired Magnes and Madge Dennison with their son John moved from Kirbuster Farm, bought Ellerslie and turned the kitchen and bedroom into one big shop, also building a new kitchen and two bedrooms (later), on the back of the house. As Madge was from Kirkwall and had been a dress-maker with Peter Shearer (tailor) she made a success of the shop and was a very pleasant and kind person.

Magnes was a great gardener and built a shed where he repaired and also sold bicycles. As school-children we could always depend on him to repair punctures or tighten chains on our bikes!

He had been in World War One and had served in Mesopotania, so had lots to tell about that. He joined the Territorial Army in Stronsay so was in Flotta with them for a time at the beginning of the war but later came back to the shop again. All through the war years the shop was very busy and Saturday night was just packed when folks went for their messages and they stayed open till quite late.

That shop sold everything from groceries, drapery, haberdashery, etc, and if you wanted a new coat Madge would send to Kirkwall (perhaps James. M. Croy) and they would send out a selection so you could choose (£1 to £3). Just imagine, hard to believe, but it is true.

After Magnes and Madge retired Ellerslie went back to a house and now a relation of Magnes is there with his wife and family.

Magnes never believed that men landed on the moon. ('Not true' he said to his grand-sons)

Hello again everyone.

What are we to make of life's ups and downs?. Stronsay folk know them as well as most. Two days ago it was miserable, one day ago was the most beautiful warm sunny day; today just seems dreich! Many of us have had a continuity of bugs and lurgy holding us down for weeks, whilst for others I hear how little things going wrong, can get us down at times- a tiny break in a vital piece of equipment means much needed work cannot happen.

Wider, the Orcadian reports of challenges facing local care services, roads, ferries etc. but amidst them some stories of individuals doing inspiring things. And still there are the major challenges facing our world! We have to deal with the good and the bad equally, but we can find inspiration if we look. Over the past couple of weeks, we have had the sadness of funerals on the island, and yet amidst them there has been much joy in remembering and sharing all that people have given us to inspire us. Stronsay seems to produce or attract people of much talent and character, maybe partly because of the way life is here?

I was thinking this week of Nana Peace especially her strength and spirit to reach age 102. Nana's surname is a reminder that Peace can be found in people despite life's troubles. Its maybe partly about her interest in and care for people but also maybe her longevity built on the hard times she might have known in early years, without all the mod cons we expect to work 24 hours a day and moan when they don't. So maybe life's ups and downs can strengthen us for whatever lies ahead, if we allow the good folk we know around us to inspire us?

We are doing a thought for the day on the church Facebook in Holy week about journeying and exploring the direction we want to travel, and at one point ask who do we trust enough to follow? Its been a week political leaders' strengths and weaknesses have been highlighted, and they do not always inspire the way others do. But the Scotland football team stood up strongly to inspire us once again – no doubt to let us down at some point in the future, part of us might say from experience! And yet there is hope. One of the reasons I am a follower of Jesus as my guide and inspiration, is that he offers hope not from just the successes but the trials of life. He led a life that was not easy; he faced the worst of trials and difficulties and yet shone through them with caring loving help and guidance for others yet having the courage to challenge the evils of the day as well- which ultimately caused his execution. Through all that, His trustworthiness stands out .

Its just about Easter time, with Palm Sunday this weekend acting as the start of the Holy Week leading up to the sadness of 'Good' Friday when Jesus is crucified asking God to forgive people, and then the joy of Easter Sunday when Jesus is seen alive. I am often reminded of this by Salvador Dali's picture of Christ of St John of the Cross, which hangs in Glasgow Art Galleries, which spoke to me even as a boy, of how through Jesus' death, somehow God was reaching down to help ordinary fishermen.

But my faith journey really started, when I got myself into deep trouble and found I could share my problems with Jesus in prayer and gain real help, guidance and strength to work with others to make things better; and I have found that continues through my life, as it can for anyone.

Some people say Easter is just a legend or a conjuring or con trick; but not for me. I am a natural sceptic and questioner, and have examined and studied the historical facts that are known and looked at eye-witness testimonies including their doubts from every angle, and studied as much as I can. When combined with modern day experiences, I believe with all my heart and life, Jesus was not just a good man who can inspire us by his selfless example, but that He offers the spiritual presence of God today for people like me and you through life's ups and downs- if we let him in.

He does not promise a life free of pain, death or disaster, but rather a Spirit working in and through people to help and inspire us as we share together for the good of those in need. Somehow his spirit lives on to help anyone seeking his love, friendship, hope forgiveness and encouragement.

God bless each

I know its true because he has been the bedrock in my life that enables me to do far more than I ever believed possible, through as many ups and downs, evils and goodness as any of us face. Anyone who knows me, knows I am far far from perfect and get it wrong often, but I am more than I would ever have been without the help of Jesus, and I know at times the Peace only he can offer amidst it all. I believe he wants to offer that to anyone, not least at Eastertime. Amidst all life throws at us, there is hope- Jesus died but his Spirit lives on to inspire around our struggling world.

Join us please at any of our Eastertime events and I pray you have a blessed Easter.

The weather is improving and with that comes activity again!

The project covers all of the North Isles, connecting communities with researchers in activities related to wellbeing. PhD geography wellbeing researcher Andy Harrod, is visiting again at the end of April and will be stopping off at 4 of the islands. He will be on Stronsay on 27th April if anyone would like to meet and chat about activities that you take part in that allow you to connect with our landscape please get in touch with me sdtprojectofficer@gmiail.com or pop me a message.

Please continue to share this information to contribute to the project. Andy will also be visiting Westray, Papa Westray and North Ronaldsay during his visit.

We also welcome Donna Blyth in her new role as island wellbeing co-ordinator with Stronsay Development Trust. I hope her role will be able to continue some of the activities established once the project ends.

Art Workshop

After the popularity of our print workshops form Orkney Art Club and demand from the community for more, India is returning on 27th April to deliver a full day nature art workshop. This was originally planned as a British Science Week event, but rescheduled with support from the British Science Association with this year's "connections" theme.

The workshop is intended to build on the skills learned from the previous workshops. There will be an opportunity for participants to exhibit their pieces and to work on a collaborative project that will create the cover for the publication of the Stronsay Wildlife Recording Project that David Askew is leading. This is a great way to work collaboratively across projects with the Natural Wellbeing Project, North Isles Landscape Partnership Scheme, Orkney Art Club and the British Science Association.

Those who have previously attended the workshops will be given the opportunity to express interest in attending, before opening out any available spaces. Don't worry, we have plans for more to be held if you can't make this one and hope that it will encourage a self-led community art group.

Up the Garden Path

Regeneration of the small greenhouse space began last summer and pupils at Stronsay school used the space as part of the national Dandelion project. Roger has been maintaining the space over winter and we are creating a sensory garden for everyone to enjoy. Even if you're not green fingered, you will be able to enjoy the space to sit, touch, feel, smell, even bring along your art skills and use it as a place of inspiration. All going well, it is hoped to be completed and ready to use by the end of April.

BSW Kits

As part of British Science Week "connections" theme, packs were distributed to families to encourage connections with each other and nature with bug hunting, rock painting, grow your own kits and art and crafts. These have been hugely popular and is great to see everyone enjoying them. If you have any feedback feel free to ping me a message or email sdt@projectofficer@gmail.com

We also have some Citizen Science guides available that have been designed by Natalie Rose at Little Hoose Creative. They have all the links and details of programmes that Dr Jenni Kakkonen talked about at our CitSci Fest event in September. They will be going into shops and available from the Development Trust office.

Stronsay Wildlife Recording Project

David has been taking the lead with this project with otter walks kicking off the events. I am linking some art activities to work with the project to include original community art to the publication. Details of summer activities will be listed but will include bees, dragonflies, wildflowers and some underwater adventures. Keep sending your photographs to the Facebook group to collate for the publication.

Thanks for your ongoing support and enthusiasm for the project. I'm looking forward to our summer programme before my role comes to an end.

Stronsay Community Wellbeing Welcomes New Coordinator!

After a successful recruitment process, we are pleased to announce the appointment of Donna Blyth to the position of Community Wellbeing Coordinator. We look forward to seeing how the project develops and how we can all assist and support Donna in this role.

The Island Wellbeing Project is a partnership between Voluntary Action Orkney and the Development Trusts of Hoy, Stronsay, Sanday, Shapinsay, and Rousay, Egilsay and Wyre.

Coordinators work with residents as part of our one to one service to help and support them with a range of issues. In the past we've helped people who have struggled with household bills, experienced loneliness, been unable to access services, had problems with housing, or who have been unable to get online.

We will work alongside you to help make sense of your situation, connect you with relevant services, and identify people and groups in the community who might be able to help. There is no eligibility criteria and you don't need a referral.

Coordinators also develop new projects and groups for the island such as community pantries, health walks, chair based dance sessions and a daily living aids library.

If you feel you, a friend or a family member could benefit from anything the wellbeing project could offer, you would like to volunteer in any capacity or you would like to know more please get in touch with Donna or the Trust office.

Just a quick "Hello" from me, to say that I am thrilled to be part of the Island Wellbeing Project. I am excited to get my teeth into lots of local projects to enhance our physical, emotional, spiritual and financial wellbeing, as well as supporting individuals and families. Keep your eye on The Limpet and the Facebook page https://www.facebook.com/sdtwellbeing for information and events. You can contact me at donna.sdtwellbeing@gmail.com or by telephone. My hours are flexible so if I don't respond immediately, don't give up!

Records of a Bygone Age The Church in Stronsay - Part 2

With the difficulty in travelling when roads were very poor or non-existent, a number of other small chapels also existed on Stronsay at various times, usually erected near to larger farms where there would have been more folk to come along to worship or built near the sea where easy access could be made by boat. There is now little to be seen of any of those buildings other than to be remembered in a field name or local folklore.

Looking north over St Peter's cemetery, the site of the old St Peter's parish church.

In St Peter's parish, in addition to the two chapels on Papa Stronsay and the parish church west of the village there was also said to be a chapel on Linga Holm, one at Corcabreck (or Kirkabreck) at the back of Whitehall Village, another at Margaret's Kirk at Clestriain, both now field names, and of course the Chapel of Kildinguie near the famous Well of Kildinguie whose waters, when taken together with dulse from Geo Odin, could reputedly cure all ails but the black Death!

We move on now to the parish of Lady, which covered most of the middle of the island, and it too had its own Parish Church thought to be in the vicinity of the cemetery which lies between Aith and Rothiesholm.

An aerial view of the Lady cemetery. Although Lady Kirk could possibly have been within the bounds of the cemetery wall, there is no evidence to show where it stood. (continued on next page)

There was also a chapel site at Quoy Olie near the Bu in Rothiesholm, thought to be where the church of St Olaf stood. In that same area were houses called St Salvator and St Catherine's and, while there is no record of chapels by that name, this could well have been Church land of which there appeared to be an abundance at that time. With a number of pre-reformation side altars in St Magnus Cathedral dedicated to various saints, including St Catherine and St Salvator, there is a possibility that, if these were in fact church lands, then the rents collected from them could have gone to help fund these altars in the Cathedral.

St Nicholas' cemetery at Holland in the south end of the island

Although there is no indication of where St Nicholas' Church stood, it too is thought to have been in the near vicinity of a cemetery, this time that of St Nicholas at Holland. There are also a number of other chapels recorded in the parish of St Nicholas: one at Mell's Kirk near the seal hide at Holland, one at Housebay, one where the farm house of Cleat now stands and another near Kirbuster. Auskerry also lays claim to an ancient chapel near its eastern shore, with the remains of some of the walls still to be seen.

The remains of three Hermitage stack sites are still visible along Stronsay's rugged east coast: one at Malme, one at Tam's Castle and one at the Brough of Burgh Head, surely the ultimate destinations for individual solitude and contemplation!

An aerial view of the hermitage site on top of the 'Tam's Castle' sea stack on Stronsay's south-east coast.

It's plain to see from this that Stronsay's religious needs were well catered for over a period of many hundreds of years but it is only as we moved toward the second half of the 16th century that records began to be more complete. This was the time of the Reformation, which caused so much strife and violence across Europe, yet seemed to come to Stronsay with something of a whimper rather than with a bang. It is recorded that James Maxwell, who had been serving the island as their Catholic Priest for 20 years, adopted the new form of Protestant worship and served as the island's minister for a further 30 years!

While the Reformation appeared to cause little strife in Orkney it also appeared to have little effect on the struggle between Church and State as to who should have ultimate control over the island properties and the power, prestige and pounds associated with that.

This was a battle that the Church was eventually set to win as, from around the 16th century onwards, the principle was accepted that the Church in Scotland had a given right to share in the fruits of the land. This developed into a practice where one-tenth of the produce of the fields, known as 'tithes' or 'teinds' was taken to support the Church within the parish, while the remainder had to provide housing, food, clothing and all the other necessities for the rural population to survive and, in addition, to cover the cost of rents to the landlord. This legally enforceable payment of the share of the produce was originally often paid in grain or meal but, if it had been a poor farming year or the tenants were facing hard times then there would be no surplus to fund the teinds, with the inevitable result that their collection could be fraught with difficulty.

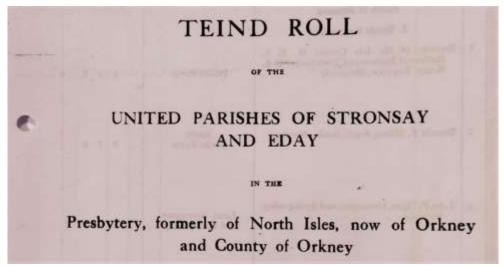

One such time was recorded in 1670 when an action was raised in the Sherriff Court by William Douglas of Egilsay against Edward Colville of Housbie, John Linklett in Clett, Oliver Rowsay in Quoyis and Magnus Keldallie in Housbie among others, where Mr Douglas complained that those debtors and many others from the estate "to the number of three score and above" had come to stop him from collecting his parsonage teinds of Housbie "armed with great birkin kaiberis, fork schafts, flailes and other great tries, and the women with boagies full of coackll shells and stones for the scareing of the horses, with the which tries the whole men threatened to strick and abuse the same complainer and his servands and in effect accomplished the samyne, to the effusion of the said complainer's servand blood in great quantities, by and attour many bauch and blea stroaks which they received upon thaire bodies. Lykas the foirnamed persones woemane did also accomplish thaire design in scareing the horse who came to transport and awat cairie the saids personage teynds, and in beating and stricking the said complainer his servands with many great stones which they threw at them, and in teareing of thaire clothes to thaure great hurt and prejudice"

Looking across what was once all part of the Housebay estate, where tenants and cottars took strong exception to paying their teinds.

Although the language is archaic and the meaning of some of the words lost, the gist of their meeting is easily enough understood. There is no record of the outcome of this case but non-payment of teinds, whether through inability to pay or through long-held principle, was to continue causing problems for as long as the system was in place.

As time passed this gathering of teinds in kind was converted into a standard monetary value, to be paid instead of with produce. By the 1920s the funding of ministers' stipends directly by teinds came to an end, with the central church in Edinburgh collecting funds from each congregation's free will offerings and then paying the minister directly, although the teinds were still shown on any title deeds as a burden on the estate and liability to pay it was transferred along with the property whenever it was sold.

A Teind Roll was kept for each parish detailing how much each farm was legally obliged to pay toward the Minister's stipend. That is all now assigned to the past.

By the 1970s, with the method of financing Ministry within parishes long changed and the value of teinds having never been increased for generations, they were hardly worth the expense of collection. With the total teinds for the whole of Stronsay worth less than £200, the Church was encouraging landowners to buy out or 'extinguish' the burden of their teinds charge for a set sum, usually between six and seven times their annual value, and this was taken up by most landowners at that time. Following an Act of Parliament in 2004, all teinds were finally extinguished and are no longer of any legal significance, with no mention of them now required in any Title Deeds to a property.

Returning now to the 17th century, the Protestants were slowly gaining more control over their own destiny but all was far from sweetness and light. Disputes arose about what form this new religion should take, with the Episcopalian vicars imposed on the congregations by the bishops not always finding favour and a growing Presbyterian movement looking to have more say in who should be appointed as preacher but, even within that movement, differences of opinion were emerging on how Scripture should be interpreted and worship conducted.

The first minister in Stronsay under the new Presbyterian authority appears to have been Rev John Cobb, ordained as such to the Stronsay Church in 1696. As he had only recently transferred away from the authority of the Episcopacy, his appointment found little favour with Stronsay's Episcopalians, who were in the greater part well-to-do landowners. They apparently continued to bear a long-standing grudge against him, leading Rev Cobb to note that, when he sought to transfer to the parish of St Andrews and Deerness in 1700, some of his parishioners "shaking off all fear of God, have wished the Devil go with me, and called me knave and wretch in their ordinary discourse." This was certainly less than a fond farewell from some of his congregation but hopefully not a view shared by all!

The Episcopalian traditions of the new Protestant church continues to be gradually overtaken by Presbyterianism, and in 1707 the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland set up as an overseeing body the Presbytery of the North Isles which, with the Presbytery of Kirkwall and the Presbytery of Cairston, meant there were now three Presbyteries in Orkney.

By 1719 the Presbytery had appointed Rev John Scollay, a Stronsay man who had been born at Hunton in 1686 and who had been Master of Kirkwall Grammar School for the previous 8 years, as Minister of Stronsay.

Local tradition and folklore has it that when Rev Scollay came back to Stronsay in 1719 the Town Clerk's daughter, Miss Helen Orem, accompanied him "to make him more comfortable", firstly as his housekeeper and later as his wife. It is always a shame to spoil a good story so I was quite disappointed to discover that, when they moved to Stronsay in 1719, she had apparently been making him comfortable for some time as by then they had been married for six years and had three children!

There is no reason to doubt the rest of the story though, where we are told that she disliked the location of the Manse, situated down in the valley, and picked out a new site for a house on the brow of the hill above Hunton near where Yearnasetter now stands. This new building never materialised, although the spot was known ever afterwards as 'Orem's Fancy' and the good wife known locally as 'Lady Orem'. Many years later a house was built on that same site and adopted the name of Orem's Fancy.

Although 'Lady Orem' never got her house on her preferred site a House was built at that spot many years later.

It was perhaps no surprise that Mrs Scollay ('Lady Orem') was less than satisfied with the Manse as it appears that little money had been spent on maintenance of Church (of which in theory there would still have been one in each parish) and Manse over the previous number of years and it was reported that in 1724, by which time John Scollay would have been five years into his ministry, "the whole three kirks are intirely demolished. The Glory of God and the good of the Souls of the Inhabitants is what is denied, and our Minister hath been exposed these four years to the greatest hazard in preaching under the open heaven."

While it was painfully obvious that Stronsay was in desperate need of a new church it was to be a further 20 years before this new kirk was to be built, too late for John Scollay who had died in 1741 but much appreciated by his son Robert who succeeded him as parish minister until he too died in 1761.

A monthly report from your councillor in the golden jubilee year of the MV Golden Mariana

After nearly a year of living with monocular vision, an unfortunate sequela of surgery I underwent to re-attach a detached retina (see Issue 111), a further trip to Raigmore Hospital in Inverness has now rendered me binocular again. Once more I shall be able to keep both eyes on what's going on at Orkney Islands Council! (Although, post-operation, I have been instructed to take it easy for the next few weeks.) In April, the bulk of the Raigmore ophthalmology services will be transferring to the new NHS National Treatment Centre – Highland, which is on the UHI Inverness College campus. This purpose-built facility will also specialise in orthopaedic care. Through collaboration between NHS Highland, Highlands & Islands Enterprise, and the University of the Highlands & Islands, a life sciences research and innovation centre is being developed on the site.

In setting our budget and council tax levels at a special Policy & Resources Committee meeting, it was agreed to increase Council charges by a minimum of 10%. Unfortunately, my amendment also to specify a maximum increase garnered no support from other councillors, apart from my good friend and colleague Cllr John Ross Scott (who is generally well tuned-in to public sentiment). Past experience has demonstrated the need for a cap on how much charges can be raised, otherwise you end up with examples like the following, which have both happened in the past: 179% increase in the charge for collecting special household waste, 1000% (sic) increase in the charge for scaffolding permits! I hope that restraint will be shown in these straightened times, but without the maximum level I called for, this, regrettably, cannot be guaranteed.

In my role as Depute Convener of the Orkney & Shetland Valuation Joint Board (O&SVJB), I have been engaged in the recruitment process for a new Assessor & Electoral Registration Officer. I am pleased to say we have appointed Rab Eunson (the middle one in the photograph below) to the position. I would like to take this opportunity to thank his predecessor, Darryl Rae for his sterling work for us and to wish him well for the future. Our Shetland colleagues joined us in Orkney for the most recent meeting of the Board, and we were able to return the hospitality we received from them in December (see Issue 119) by showing them around some facilities run by Orkney Islands Council: Tankerness House Museum, St Magnus' Cathedral, and the Pickaquoy Centre. You can find out all about the O&SVJB and what it does at our website: www.orkney-shetland-vjb.co.uk.

In my role as OIC's representative on the University of the Highlands & Islands Foundation, I attended the UHI Foundation Conference, although, because of my recent eye surgery, I joined by Webex rather than attend in person, so I missed out on the lunch and a valuable networking opportunity. In one of the talks we were told how the West of Orkney Windfarm consortium is contributing significant funding to the UHI's STEM (science, technology, engineering, maths) outreach programme, curriculum development, scholarships, apprenticeship programme support, and even a professorial chair. One of the full-time STEM posts will be based in Orkney.

Lately, you may have experienced difficulty viewing my councillor website, clackson.info. This is because I needed to activate its new SSL certificate, which is not a trivial procedure. I am much obliged to my son, Wulfric for doing it for me. My old councillor website, Ifsp.pbworks.com is still active and is regularly updated, and all issues of my Letter from School Place can also be downloaded from there.

Member for the North Isles Ward Depute Convener Orkney & Shetland VJB West Manse, Sanday stephen.clackson@orkney.gov.uk

I am available to teach all primary subjects, including reading, writing, spelling and numeracy, and English for BGE and Senior Phase pupils. As a Support for Learning Teacher and former SENCo I have spent many years specialising in teaching pupils with a range of learning and behaviour difficulties. I am qualified to complete assessments and to write reports for examination access arrangements and for Pupil Support Plans/Child Plans.

SHORT TERM LETS—LICENSING From OIC Updates on Facebook

The Scottish Government is raising further awareness around the new short-term lets licensing and what hosts need to do as part of the application process.

Like all local authorities throughout Scotland, the Council has been tasked with administering the new scheme on behalf of the Scottish Government and a number of hosts have successfully applied for their new licences through OIC – and a number of others are within the system.

Did you know that from 1 October 2022, new hosts of short-term lets are legally required to obtain a licence from their local council before accepting bookings and hosting guests?

Hosts of short-term lets that have operated prior to 1 October 2022 (existing hosts) have until 1 October 2023 to apply for a licence and can continue operating until their application has been determined.

The Council has a dedicated web page on short-term lets licensing to try and assist folk through the application process. Please take a look here https://www.orkney.gov.uk/Service-Directory/L/short-term-lets.htm as it contains links to a wealth of information on the Scottish Government legislation, the application process, downloadable form and fees.

If you need support through the process then please contact the Short-term Lets Licensing Team via email shortletslicensing@orkney.gov.uk or by telephone to 01856873535 extensions 2232 or 2229 and leave a voicemail if officers are not available.

More information about the new licensing requirements can be found at https://shorttermlets.campaign.gov.scot/
